

HANDSHAKE FROM A DISTANCE

di James Kwaku Adjei-Buor

“Handshake from a distance” is a retelling of stories about missionaries who risked their lives traveling days and nights over the Atlantic Ocean to reach new missionary territories in Africa and beyond. Many of the white expatriates who responded to the call of God through the charisma of their founders ceaselessly worked to enrich the culture, beliefs and practices of the beautiful heritage of their mission lands. Dr. James Kwaku Adjei-Buor recounts memories of his old time village experience, where an energetic young missionary, Fr. Michael, encouraged, supported and influenced poor and illiterate farmers to invest in their children’s education. Knowledge is power, says an old adage but education, whether local or western leads to liberation, transformation, and development. Interestingly, the author of this wonderful book is a beneficiary of such education and is paying back to society through teaching and pastoral engagement.
